Westover launches Health E-card to allow patients to access medical records anywhere in the world

A new electronic card which can be used to access a patient's complete medical history from a computer anywhere in the world was launched today by healthcare provider Westover Medical.

The credit sized card will be offered to members of Westover, and will allow them to store all their medical history in one place. Westover is the first private healthcare provider in the UK to offer the E-card to its customers and highlights Westover's approach to using the latest technology to improve patient care.

The data is accessed by connecting the card to any computer, and going through Westover's secure website. Records will be password protected, and no data will be saved locally on the computer it is accessed through, ensuring patient confidentiality. The card could have considerable benefits for patients with complicated medical conditions who travel abroad or even for students going to university for the first time.

Dr Amber Kennard, CEO of Westover Medical said: "We believe the Health E-card will be enormously popular with our members. Not only does it give them control over the access to their medical records, the ability to access their complete medical history through any computer in the world is excellent news for patients with complicated chronic conditions, who may need to seek treatment from people other than their GP."

Westover clinics provide a full range of the highest-quality health services all under one roof, allowing patient care to be delivered seamlessly. Westover provides general practitioners, consultant medical specialists and surgeons, dentists and complementary therapists all working together in integrated health practices, all supported by the latest in diagnostic technologies for early detection of potential illness and disease.

Membership of Westover costs £45 a month, and allows members unlimited visits to a GP. Westover services are also available on a walk in basis. Westover clinics can be found in South Kensington, Wandsworth and Notting Hill.
